GRAND TRUNK WRECK.

More of the Dead Victims are Identified.

The Prosecuting Attorney Making a Searching Investigation to Fix the Responsibility.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Oct. 23.—Late last night two more of the bodies burned in the Grand Trunk wreck were identified. The remains are those of Mr and Mrs Charles Saxe, of New York city. They were identified by a brother from that city. Three more bodies were identified this morning. The following is the list: Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Deland, of Thornburg, Ont. J. J. Brown, of Strathroy, Ont.

The coroner's inquest on the awful railroad horror was set for 9 o'clock this morning and sensational legal developments are expected. Owing to the absence of one of the jurors, however, it was some time after that before proceedings commenced.

Prosecutor Clark is the busiest man in Battle Creek this morning. He means to leave no stone unturned in sifting the horrible affair to the bottom.

"I know that convictions are seldom obtained in these cases," he said this morning, "but I think the result will be different in this one. The coroner's inquest will come first. I have adjourned the criminal examination until after that is completed, and shall myself conduct the examination of witnesses before Coroner Gillette. My reason for wishing to have the inquest first is because a proceeding of that character admits of greater license in the matter of examining witnesses. I do not know whether Engineer Wooley and Conductor Scott have retained counsel or not, but presume they have. There is nothing connected with the entire tragedy that I shall not endeavor to bring out at the inquest. Neither will the higher railway officials be left out of the examination. I mean to find out whether the rush of business has induced them to employ incompetent subordinates, and if so, why they should not be held responsible for such acts. There are a great many features of the affair which will bear investigation. I can't understand why a high building should have been placed inside the curve where the accident occurred, effectually shutting off all view in each direction. Then we have an ordinance which prohibits the running of trains within the city limits at a speed greater than ten miles per hour. I think the speed made by the east bound train must have been great from the time it left the depot, in order to strike with such terrible force. These conflicting stories of the engineer and Conductor Scott must also be straightened out somehow. It is a matter in which the entire country is interested and there must be no hesitancy in getting at the truth."

MORE ACTIVITY IN INDIANAPOLIS.

Outlook Brighter Than Since the Financial Stringency Began.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 23.—The industrial situation in this city is steadily improving and those engaged in manufacturing regard the outlook as better than it has been since the financial stringency began some three months ago. In the furniture industries there is not the activity which was hoped for when winter orders came in, but the iron and steel factories are employing nearly their usual complement of men. There is a feeling that the failure of the senate to act upon the repeal bill is responsible for the tardiness with which orders in some of the industries are coming in and manufacturers generally express the belief that action on the part of that body would materially help the industrial outlook. The suspension of work in the cities of the natural gas belt has caused a great many laboring men to come to this city and the number of unemployed is larger than for years, but except for this condition, for which the industries here are not responsible, there would be but little enforced idleness. The city is giving employment to a large number of men in sewer and street improvements and this class of labor all find employment.

NO PLACE FOR RELATIVES.

Foremen in Railroad Shops Must Discharge All Their Relatives.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 23.—The most radical order ever issued by the officials of the consolidated road has been given to the heads of the various departments. It was in effect that all heads of subordinate departments must discharge all of their relatives whom they had given work under them. The order was issued yesterday only to foremen in the repair shops, but it is understood that it will be extended to all departments immediately. Assistant Superintendent Waller at once obeyed the order by discharging his son and brother in law. Many others were dismissed in the shops. It is understood that the order comes from President Clark and will be extended next week to the officers and the train service.

CLAUS SPRECKELS

Talks About the Sugar Interests and Hawaiian Affairs.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Claus Spreckels, the sugar king, who has large interests in Hawaii, has been in town several days. Mr. Spreckels spoke freely to a reporter about sugar interests and Hawaiian affairs. "I am opposed to stealing," he said, "and do not believe that might makes right. The United States seized the Sandwich islands without any right to do so, and assumed charge of the affairs there. It is not because I have sugar industries there that I say this policy was unjustifiable. It was too much like grabbing, and contrary, therefore, to the spirit of fair play. If this government anticipated that England or Japan was after Hawaii a mistake was made. I am sure the English government did not and does not seek to establish control over the group."

STEAMER LOST.

Sunk in Lake Erie During the Recent Storm.

She Proves to be the Riverside and She Carried Eight Persons—All Were Drowned.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 23.—A large vessel, evidently a steamer, has gone to the bottom of Lake Erie a few miles from this port. Who she is or when she went down is a mystery. Captain Joseph Single, of the fishing tug, R. T. Roy, made the startling discovery yesterday. He was running out to lift his nets when he saw the spars of a sunken vessel protruding from the water. There were three single stick spars, with white painted tops, each ornamented with gilt specks. About thirty-five feet were exposed. The vessel is twenty-three miles from this port. Captain Single took soundings and found that she was lying in thirteen fathoms of water. Captain Single is of the opinion that she is a large steamer. Her identity is a mystery. No vessels have yet been reported lost.

LATER.

J. M. Jones, of the firm of J. M. Jones & Brother, vessel agents, told an Associated Press representative this morning that the foundered boat was undoubtedly his schooner, the Riverside. She has been missing since the big storm of the 13th inst. and no tidings have been gleaned from her since that time. The Riverside was commanded by Captain David G. Farrington, of Detroit, and his wife was cook on the boat. She carried five other persons, all of whom are undoubtedly lost. The only names that could be learned of the missing ones are Joseph Hargreaves, mate, his son, John Hargreaves, and John Paige, both seamen.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.

The Roby Arena Will be Reopened for Athletic Performances.

HAMMOND, Ind., Oct. 23.—In this city during the past week articles of association have been drawn up for an organization which will be incorporated as the Hammond club, to take possession of the Roby arena to give contests of science and skill that will come wholly within the law passed by the last legislature for the benefit of Dominick O'Malley. The members of the new organization are all residents of Hammond and are among the most influential citizens and the wealthiest men of Lake county. The superintendent granted by the supreme court on Friday was asked for by the new organization, and as soon as the club is incorporated they will be ready for business. The restraining order and injunction issued by Judge Gillett against the Columbian club will not be effective against the new organization, as the arena at the time of the injunction was the property of private individuals, and at no time was it ever the property of the club. The records show that the land on which the arena stands is owned by Edward Roby and C. B. Shedd, and the improvements were assigned to Marlin Nathanson, of Chicago. The Hammond club has secured his interest, and has leased the ground from Messrs. Roby and Shedd. There will be no more prize fights, as the members believe that should they attempt to pull off a fight Governor Matthews would order out the militia again. The opening under the new management will be a benefit for Griffo and Lavigne, who were to have fought the night of September 4. Among the stockholders are two attorneys and others holding office.

LASHES HER HUBBY'S PARAMOUR.

Mrs. Slifer, Protected by Her Son With a Revolver, Causes a Sensation.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Oct. 23.—One of the most sensational scenes occurred at 8 o'clock Saturday night on Washington street, in the presence of 200 people of both sexes. Ellis Slifer, one of the leading implement dealers, had been suspected by his son, who is also his business partner, of having clandestine meetings with George Patterson's wife, in the former's store. Steve, the son, watched for his father, and as soon as the woman entered, brought his mother, gave her a horsewhip, and standing by with a drawn revolver, broke in the door and directed his mother to lay the lash to the woman. She did so in a vigorous manner. The screams of the Patterson woman brought hundreds to the scene. The streets were crowded with excited people and lawsuits will follow.

RELEASED INSURANCE TOO SOON

West Muncie Grass Works and Tank Factory Burned.

MUNCIE, Ind., Oct. 23.—The West Muncie novelty and brass works and the tank factory buildings were burned at West Muncie early yesterday morning. The machinery was very fine and the loss is conservatively calculated at $25,000, with but $3,500 insurance. A short time ago these were $10,000 insurance on the concern. A car load of tanks ready for shipment to Chicago was destroyed. The stockholders are George and John W. Lowe, Col. F. E. Bengor and Clem Hoover, recently from Watkins Glen, N. Y. The fire was of incendiary origin. The factories will be rebuilt.

COMPROMISE FAILED.

Democrats Cannot Get Enough Pledges to Carry It

And They Will Never Bring the Bill Before the Senate—They Lack Four of Carrying.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The senate entered upon the twelfth week of the present session at 10 o'clock this morning, no adjournment having occurred since a week ago today, the legislative day of Tuesday, October 17, still continues.

Mr. Stewart (rep.), of Nevada, gave notice of an amendment which he intended to offer to the repeal bill, proposing a conference to be held at Washington within nine months between delegates of the United States, Mexico, Central and South America, Hayti and San Domingo for the adoption of silver coin to become legal tender in all commercial transactions between the citizens of the countries represented in the conference.

The house joint resolution for the printing of 2,000 copies of the hearings before the committee of ways and means of the house was agreed to with an amendment making the number 4,000 to be divided equally between the senate and the house.

The consideration of the bill to repeal the purchasing clauses of the silver act of 1890 was then resumed and Mr. Jones (rep.), of Nevada, entered upon the fourth installment of his argument in opposition to the bill.

Mr. Jones made an elaboration of the argument he was advancing when the senate took a recess Saturday evening, that the standard of a country could be neither gold, silver, nor a material thing, but that whatever the standard might be, it was quantative and the value of each unit depended upon the number of units and that there could be a single standard in a country and that one of quantity.

Those who were expecting to see the democratic compromise bill introduced in the senate this morning and speedily passed through the body found when the senate met at 10 o'clock that they were more than likely to be doomed to disappointment, and as the day wore on the indications in that direction became still more marked. The opinion is now very general among senators who will discuss the question at all that the compromise bill over which senators were so sanguine Saturday will never be introduced in the senate. The reason for this change in the situation is found in the fact that the compromisers have been unable to get a sufficient number of pledges to guarantee the passage of the bill in case it should be introduced and they have said from the beginning that it would bring in no bill unless its passage had been assured before its introduction. Statements differ as to the number of democratic senators who have signed the agreement, but the best authority obtainable places the number at thirty-nine or four less than a majority. These four they have so far found it utterly impossible to obtain on the democratic side of the chamber, and all overtures to the republicans have so far been repelled without exception. It can be definitely stated that the members of the steering committee have made individual appeals to a great many republican senators, but have been rebuffed alike by repeal and silver senators.

Some of them have given their positive negatives, while others reply more diplomatically that they must see the bills before they can give an answer. The repeal and the silver republican units in opposition to the measure for different reasons, the former because of the failure to provide for bonds and because of the provision for coining the seignorage and the latter because of the short time that the Sherman law is to be continued.

Still they think that if the democratic bill should be presented it might be possible for the two republican factions to unite upon a bill, and with the aid of the populists and possibly a few democrats get it through. The situation is a puzzle to the democratic senatorial managers, and they seem quite at sea as to what to undertake next. They have not yet abandoned all efforts to bring the senators who have so far refused to put their signatures to the agreement to see that it is the best thing to do.

It is also understood that they are still seeking to secure the approval of the president, without whose acquiescence they cannot accomplish anything. It is even intimated that if he gives consent it will be impossible to obtain some of the missing names. If the compromise is defeated and definitely dropped, as it seems inevitable that it will, they may pursue one of three courses. It may be to adjourn until December 1, press the bill on the present plan or attempt to secure the adoption of the cloture resolution. One or two democrats expressed themselves this morning as favorable to adjournment, but the matter has not been canvassed sufficiently to warrant any prediction. Senator Hill will doubtless press his cloture proposition if he can obtain assurance of sufficient assistance to make it worth while to do so.

Senator Voorhees states this after noon that he will move an adjournment at the close of today's session of the senate until 11 o'clock, tomorrow and will not attempt to prolong the legislative day of last Tuesday, upon which the senate is still working. It is a matter of surprise as to whether this will be done for the purpose of bringing up cloture but it can be used for that purpose if desired and the supposition is natural that he desires to prepare the way for it if he should deem it advisable to bring it up. The preponderance of opinion is that it will be very difficult to pass a cloture resolution.

Republican repeal senators are by no means united upon the advisability of a cloture resolution, though very strong pressure has been put upon them to get them to agree to it unanimously. The outlook in the senate is now for continued debate upon the repeal bill.

When it became apparent today that the compromise scheme had failed the silver men renewed their tactics of calling for a quorum.

AN OPEN SWITCH

Throws a Vestibuled Train Into the Ditch.

Miraculous Escape of the Passengers, Who Frantically Jump Through the Doors and Windows.

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 23.—Baltimore and Ohio vestibuled train which left Chicago at 5 p. m., yesterday ran into an open switch at Cuttery junction, on the Pittsburg and Western division of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, at 7:30 this morning. The engine and four sleeping cars were derailed. One of the sleeping cars went over an embankment. Though many passengers jumped for their lives from the doors and windows of the train, no one so far as known was seriously hurt. A wrecking crew was sent out to replace the train on the track and traffic was resumed about noon.

TO ABSORD A FARMERS' SOCIETY

Alliance of Indiana Denies Coalition With a Nonpolitical Organization.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 23.—The Farmers' Mutual Benefit association of the state will hold its annual meeting here tomorrow, and immediately following the Farmers' Alliance will be in session. An effort is making on the part of the latter to form a coalition between the two organizations that will change the complexion of the Mutual Benefit association from a nonpartisan to a political factor and result in the nomination of a farmers' ticket next summer. During the last few months the alliance have been working in the lodges of the Farmers' Mutual Benefit association, of which they are also members, trying to create a sentiment in favor of a coalition and united political action. How far they have succeeded is not known, but prominent leaders in the nonpartisan society say that the proposed union would disrupt their organization, and for this reason they do not think a coalition possible. It is claimed that the charter of the organization prohibits the nomination or indorsement of candidates for office, and that a union with the alliance would be the practical absorption of the Farmers' Mutual Benefit association by that organization.

ONCE A MILLIONAIRE.

Cassius Read, of New York, is Now Penniless.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The Cassius B. Read of twelve years ago was a man reputed to be worth from $700,000 to $1,000,000, principal proprietor of the Hoffman house, owner of large estates in New York and Virginia, and interested in half a dozen enterprises requiring the outlay of large sums of money. The same Cassius B. Read today is said to be practically penniless with no interest in the Hoffman house, no estates in New York or Virginia or real property upon which he could negotiate a loan of $100. Mr. Read's home at Far Rockaway was sold under foreclosure proceedings October 14.

MAJORS TO BE PUT ON TRIAL.

His Crime is Persuading a Government Officer.

VINCENNES, Ind., Oct. 23.—Deputy United States Marshal Grove took "Doc" Majors to Evansville last evening, where he will be tried on a charge of impersonating a United States officer. He would go to a county post office, claim to be a United States post office inspector, and demand possession of the mail. He inspected several offices in this county. Majors claims to be a doctor and a detective. He was greatly feared among the ignorant colored people, who believed he was a witch. He is a singularly looking mulatto from the fact that he has red hair and a red mustache.

KILLED IN FRONT OF A CHURCH.

Millard Wellman Shot by Owen Pleasants After a Desperate Fight.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 23.—At Guyandotten, two miles east of Huntington, W. Va., Millard Wellman and Owen Pleasants, two hashers, settled an old feud. They met on one of the Main streets, and Wellman used a knife on Pleasants, cutting a fearful gash in his side. The latter pursued the antagonist, and in front of the Methodist Episcopal church where services were being held, shot Wellman dead. Pleasants is also dangerously wounded, and will probably die. The affair has created intense excitement.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Andrew Kimball, a real estate dealer, drowned himself this morning in Lake Michigan at Ninety eighth street, the place where his eighteen-year-old daughter committed suicide Saturday in a similar manner. The daughter was despondent over poor health. Illness. The father was overwhelmed with grief over the loss of his daughter. Miss Kimball is portrayed as a result of the double bereavement

WAS TRACED HERE.

A Horse Thief Somewhere in Fort Wayne.

A Stranger Steals a Livery Rig From Graham Bros., of Columbia City—Team Lost.

A horse thief with a stolen horse and buggy was in Fort Wayne somewhere yesterday afternoon, but vigilant search upon the part of Sheriff Clatterster and the city police failed to locate him.

Yesterday morning a smooth, well dressed stranger called at the livery stable of Graham Bros. in Columbia City and asked for a horse and buggy with which to drive to a farm a few miles north of that place. The stranger gave his name as D. Porter and said he would be back in an hour or two. About noon the livery stable keepers became alarmed at the non-appearance of the stranger and the rig and sent out an officer, who easily traced the stolen property to this city. Here all traces were lost. The horse is described as being a strawberry roan, nine years old and weighing 1050 pounds. The buggy is a side bar and also has rear and front springs.

THREE SORTS OF TROUBLE.

Divorces One Woman, Marries Another Too Soon, and Is Sued by a Third.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 21.—Charles R. Adams, the well known operatic tenor, is in trouble, all on account of several fair women. Adams obtained a divorce from one and married another of them before the six months required by statute had expired. Now comes a third desirous of large sums of money because her feelings have been injured. The last claims a breach of promise as a result of the professor's magnetism while acting as her musical instructor. Mr. Adams has to pay his divorced wife $300 alimony a year now.

The tenor was at one time a distinguished star in the operatic firmament, and as such won the favor of crowned heads in European capitals. Before he went abroad he married a Miss Holbrook, from whom he had two sons and from whom he got a divorce. His second wife was an Austrian, by whom he had six children. She, however, preferred her ancestral halls on the banks of the Danube to the climate of Boston, and in May last a divorce was granted. Then without waiting for the statutory half year in alopes Adams married Miss Sally Frisee, a Grand Rapids belle. This was in July.

Miss Clara Barton, a southern girl, who was a pupil of Adams, now sets up that he promised marriage to her, and asks the court to annul the Adams-Frisee marriage, hinting that after that is accomplished a breach of promise suit will be entered.

FAMILY WHICH RUNS TO DIVORCE

Mother Five, Sister Five, and Three for the Applicant for a Fourth.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 23.—In the circuit court Saturday Mrs. Rosa Bell Church, who was married in 1886, when but fourteen years old, to Harry Church, who was nineteen, applied for a divorce and alleged cruelty and failure to support. Rosa Bell is a handsome girl, with a light complexion and merry eyes. She said that she was married when she was thirteen, and had had three husbands, all of whom she got rid of in the courts. She told the court that her mother had been divorced five times and that her sister, Mrs. Kidder, had obtained one divorce. The husband expressed a happy willingness that his young wife should have a divorce. Judge Harper was inclined to refuse a decree in order to check the divorce record in the family, but the appealing face of the plaintiff persuaded him to take the case under advisement. "It looks as if poor family is suffering from hereditary divorce. This has been going on for three generations and I wish I had some way to stop it. If I thought you had any intention of marrying again I would refuse it."

THE FARMER WAS OUT.

How the Cute Little Boy Got a Whole Chicken.

A farmer drove into the city this morning with a wagon load of chickens which he sold to Zollars & Mers, the South Calhoun street grocers, and, while he was taking them out of the wagon to carry them into the store, one of the fowls escaped.

A little boy was standing near the wagon, and, turning to him, the farmer said:

"Say, boy, if you could catch that chicken for me, I'll give you half of it."

The boy started off on the chase and in a few moments returned with the chicken. "Here's the chicken, sir" he said, going up to the farmer, "you said you would give me half for catching it."

"Oh, yes" was the reply. "Well, I am getting twenty cents a piece for these chickens. So I'll give you the half which would be ten cents," and reaching into his pocket he gave the boy a dime.

The little fellow took the money, but still held on to the chicken. He was thinking

"Say, mister," he said, "What will you take for your half of the chicken?"

"Why, ten cents, of course!"

"All right, I'll buy it," quickly spoke the boy, handing the farmer back the same dime he had given him, and off he started with the chicken.

The boy had turned the corner a square away, before the farmer began to comprehend the situation

LIVES A HERMIT LIFE.

Miss Mary Welty, Aged Sixty-one, Residing Near Here,

Has Never Entered a Store, a Church, a School House, Never Seen a Railroad Train and Rides From Strangers.

There is now living, not far from this city, a woman sixty-one years old, who has never seen a village, town or city, who has never seen a railroad train, who has never entered a store or business building of any kind, who has never been inside of a church, or who has never crossed the threshold of a schoolhouse, and yet her health, physical condition and liberty has been such that she could have enjoyed all these privileges had she desired to do so.

Strange, in this age of civilization, in this enlightened Hoosier state, that such should be the case, and yet THE SENTINEL can call as living witnesses to the truthfulness of the above statements such well known citizens of our county as Dr. G. M. Shutt, William Kline, John Gladding, John Mannan and others, all of whom are acquainted with the facts mentioned in this article.

The woman of whom this can be said is Miss Mary Welty. She lives in the southeastern part of this county, near the Decatur county line, five miles south of Monroeville, five miles northeast of Decatur, two and one half miles from what was once the village of East Liberty, and twenty-one miles from this city.

Miss Welty was born in Ohio, not far from what is now the flourishing city of Akron. In 1840, with her parents, when she was eight years old, she came across the country in a settler's wagon, and settled on the farm where she now lives and where she has resided ever since.

Her father pre-empted eighty acres of land there from the government, cleared it up and before his death, which occurred about twelve years ago, had made it one of the finest farms in the county. Here he lived for nearly half of a century, going only to the neighboring towns when necessary, and with his family living a sort of quiet and exclusive life, but enjoying the esteem and respect, by his honest ways, of those with whom he became acquainted and rearing a family of six children, only one of whom, with his wife, is now dead.

One of his daughters married a farmer of Union township, Adams county, and is now Mrs. George Baker. One of his sons, George married and is now living near the old homestead. The other three children are John, a bachelor seventy years old, Mattie, unmarried, sixty five years old and Mary, the subject of this article, who is also unmarried, sixty-one years old.

The two married children of this somewhat peculiar family are social, pleasant and mingle freely with other people, and have long since adopted the ways and customs of the world, but the single children, John and Mattie, seldom go to town or hold conversation with anybody, seeming to be contented and happy with their simple life and odd ways.

Mary, however, is strangly peculiar. She never steps off of the farm and has not done so since her father first settled on it fifty three years ago. She is rarely ever seen by any person, and when visitors come to the house she will run away and hide, so that no one outside of the family has ever spoken to her, and yet she is bright and intelligent and talks freely with her brothers and sisters. She has, as stated in the opening paragraph of this article, never entered a store, or church, or school house, or seen anything of life outside of her own simple, plain home. She often says she would like to go into a store to see what it looked like, if she wasn't afraid people would see her. She is in fact a sort of a hermit and seems to love to live a hermit's life, free from the gaze of the world.

The three single children, John, Mattie and Mary, live in the house which their father built, a good frame residence, John conducting the farm and the two girls attending to the household. They are the most tidy of people and industrious and methodical in their work. In their household duties the two women are peculiar. When doing their family washing they have separate tubs for different articles —one for towels another for table cloths, another for wearing apparrel and another for bed linen, never using the same tub for any two different kinds of these articles.

In the milching of their cows they have a separate pail for each cow and will never, under any circumstances, allow the bucket to set upon the ground.

The same cleanliness characterizes their making of cider. Every apple is washed and then peeled, cored and every rot spot and worm hole cut out.

While making cider a few days ago Mattie, the oldest of the sisters, slipped and broke her leg, and now all the burden of the household duties rests upon Mary, which she performs with the same care and neatness that her sister does. She is in fact a model housekeeper and her brothers and sisters speak of her as being bright and intelligent, her only peculiar difference from other people being her dread of being seen by strangers, from whom she will flee and not make her appearance again until they leave the house.

After the family settled on their present home farm, East Liberty, which is two and one half miles away, sprang up and in 1860 was a village of some 200 inhabitants, with stores and houses, but it has now almost vanished as a town, there only remaining a church, a parsonage, and three other houses.

The murder case of Joseph Deal, who is charged with killing Hugh Cyr, sr., at Edgerton in June last was called in the circuit court this morning before Judge O'Rourke.

The morning hours were spent in the selection of a jury from the venire which had been summoned and at noon the entire panel for the trial of the case had been selected and sworn as follows:

Henry Piepenbrink, City.

The attorneys in the case are Prosecuting Attorney P. B. Colerick and J. M. Robinson, for the state, and Henry Colerick and Ed. France for the defense.

Mr. Robinson made the opening statement for the prosecution. He reviewed the bloody double murder and stated the testimony by which they expected to prove that the defendant killed the Elder Cyr and by which they expected to convict him of murder in the first degree. He was followed by Henry Colerick, who made the opening statement for the defense.

There are some twenty or thirty witnesses for the state and most of these were brought in yesterday afternoon from Edgerton by Deputy Sheriff Meiching. The court room is crowded and considerable interest is being manifested in the case. T. J. Logan, the court stenographer, is taking a short hand report of the testimony.

SPORTING writers and telegraph editors used "battle royal" in half the newspapers of the country when telling of the last Vigilant-Valkyrie race. There is no such thing as a battle royal between two contestants. The term is exact and technical. A battle royal is a fight of many, in which every one is against every other one, and the best wins.

MR. BUTT, of Colorado, has introduced a bill in congress to reduce the fees for transcribing testimony in land cases in the states west of the Missouri river. Many years ago the west officers found it necessary to have the fees doubled because of the unusual expenses attending to such business. Now that has been obviated and the members of congress from the west have been asked to have the fees reduced.

An Idea Worth Considering.

The particulars of the wreck on the Pennsylvania railroad, which occurred near Monteeville are given in our railroad columns. The frequent and fatal railway accidents of the year show that the art of safely transporting passengers by rail is far from being mastered yet. In the appliances for safety in the methods of running trains consisting several sections and in the choice between upon whom the responsibility of moving trains safely must rest, there is still much room for improvement. And it is an overwhelming pity that the necessary wisdom and experience in this direction must be bought at the cost of so many dead and maimed human beings. Probably from the dear experience that the railroads have had this year may be evolved some means, some precautions by which these wrecks, even in times of great travel like this, may be made less frequent. One suggestion we have heard in a good one, and that is that every railroad train should have one employe on it who has no other duty to perform than that of looking after the safety of the train and the passengers and using every precaution to guard against accidents of every kind. This man ought not to be the conductor or the engineer, but another employe who has nothing else to do but that of giving his entire time to the safety of the train. If this is done, with watchfulness and care from the other employes, railroad wrecks would be less frequent.

Influence of Happy Homes.

One of the prominent men of our city, in speaking of any employe, whose duty it was to handle the money of the establishment, made this suggestive remark: "This man I have always trusted. He is honest, exemplary, cool, methodical and impressionable. Had I known that he had not a happy home I would not have kept him as a cashier. I would not have any man in such a capacity who did not live happy at home."

In this remark of this business man the rock fossil for reflection. There is a truth involved which is of the greatest importance and the widest application. The home life is the fossil of all life, and a happy home is essential to safety and success in any department of life.

Occasionally a man is strong enough and sufficiently self-controlled to endure discomfort and unhappiness at home without disclosing it at any point of duty. But the majority are not so. They become discouraged, lose heart and at last break down by drinking or seeking companionship or pleasures in such way and at such places that soon lead them to their ruin.

Many of the wrecks that now line life's railway can be traced by their cause. In fact when one finds himself tied to a home in which there is no happiness, no zeal, no spur for him it is not surprising that he becomes discouraged and let's long past to the ruin. It is the natural result, however much we may deplore it, and many a wreck I am now a their witness to the direful results wrought by an unhappy home.

On the other hand, a man is prepared to stand almost any storm, meet any fire or face any hardship or suffering which may fall to his lot in life if he has a good home full of sunshine and cheer during his hour of trial. There he gets strong in it he has a home there for which to endure and fight. Many a man's success may be attributed to the happy home in which he lives.

COLLISION OF TRAINS.

Nos. 23 and 4 Try to Pass on a Single Track.

Four Passengers and Four Trainmen Injured and Two Engines and Four Cars Slightly Damaged.

Fort Wayne citizens who were astir on the streets at an early hour Sunday morning were startled by the rumor that twenty people had been killed and double that number injured in a head-end collision at Monroeville between Pittsburg trains Nos 23 and 4 Like all first reports of wrecks the story concerning this one was far from the truth. They accepted it as they found it, and went about with blanched cheeks inquiring for particulars.

The rumor had its origin in a telegram stating that a wreck had occurred near Monroeville and calling for the wreck car and some physicians. The dispatcher receiving the message called up Dr. Stemen by telephone and requested him to get other surgeons and make all possible speed in getting down to the depot.

The rumor passed quickly from one person to another, each adding some startling detail to it, until it had reached every part of the city. Our citizens were greatly shocked by the news of the alleged terrible disaster, and many of them set out to learn more about the accident.

By 8:30 o'clock several hundred persons, including the wives and children of some of the trainmen, had congregated at the depot and railway offices, all eager for news of the wreck. About the same hour the first authentic account of the accident was received at the dispatcher's office and Will Tigar freely informed all inquirers as to the true state of affairs

The wreck, while bad enough, was an insignificant affair in comparison to the first stories concerning it. The particulars are as follows.

The conductor of the second section of the Columbian express had orders to stop his train on the main track at Monroeville and wait for the second section of No 4 to sidetrack. The express stopped as directed, about six car lengths from the end of the siding, and the flagman went forward to throw the switch for the east bound train. There was a dense fog and the trainmen could not see 100 feet ahead. Engineer Cowan, of No. 4, understood the orders perfectly, but on account of the fog, had lost his bearing and was running along slowly looking for some "landmark" to tell him where he was He did not think he was anyway near the passing point, however, and before the flagman could throw the switch, No. 4 was onto it and an instant later the two engines crashed together.

The shock was terrific and passengers and crews on both trains were badly shaken up, and several were more or less severely injured.

The accident occurred at an unfortunate hour—just when the Pullman car occupants were taking their morning ablutions, and some of them were thrown off their feet and injured. Those on No 23 who were hurt were:

Edward E. Hayes, Philadelphia, palm of right hand lacerated. He was standing at a window and the force of the collision threw him forward against the glass.

Miss B. Shields, Philadelphia, face bruised.

W. S. P Shields, Philadelphia, back bruised and sprained

Mrs M. J. Erisman, Philadelphia, thrown down and right hip painfully bruised.

Had these persons been in their berths or seats they would undoubtedly have escaped injury.

The trainmen injured are:

Engineer Robert B. Cowan, bruised about the body and limbs, and scalded by escaping steam.

Baggageman A. G. Stevens, struck by a falling trunk; head cut and bruised.

Fireman L. G Dailey, right knee cap fractured. He jumped from the engine.

Brakeman F. E Hunt, head and spine severely hurt. It was thought at first that his skull was fractured, but later examination proved this to be an error Hunt was standing in the cab and he, also, jumped.

Perhaps a dozen of the passengers on No. 4 were thrown off their feet and more or less bruised, but none were injured so as to prevent them from continuing on their journey. Dr. George G Stemen accompanied them to Van Wert, where the company's local surgeon was in readiness to attend them to their homes. Dr Stemen returning to Fort Wayne.

The conductor of No. 23 was standing up by his engine when he saw the headlight of No. 4 loom up through the fog. He yelled to Engineer Doty of engine No 131 to jump, which he did and his train being at a standstill of course he escaped injury, as did also his fireman.

Baggage Master Stevens resides in Crestline. He was brought to this city, where his wounds were dressed, and he left for his home on the Keystone express at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The other injured trainmen came in on the fourth section of No. 23 and were taken off at Lafayette street. Dailey was taken to his home, corner of Clinton and Chestnut streets, and Cowan and Hunt were taken to St. Joseph hospital.

The injured passengers on No 23 were able to continue on their journey.

Dr. C. B. Stemen going with them as far as Plymouth, where he turned them over to the company's physician at that place

The shock of the collision drove the tanks of both engines through the front ends of the baggage cars and the trucks of the baggage car in No. 4 were knocked out from underneath.

Both engines were badly damaged and pretty much in the same manner. The cabs were demolished, pilots knocked off, smoke boxes raved in, frames bent so as to misplace the links and air drums and the footboards and some of the side rods knocked off. Engine 127, hauling No 4 and manned by Engineer Cowan, was probably the most seriously damaged. It is a miracle that Cowan escaped with his life as the cab and all the pipes, levers, etc., on the boiler head were almost completely destroyed. Both engines were brought into the shops this morning and will be repaired as soon as possible.

The wreck car bearing a number of the local officials and Dr. Porter, Kessler, Gustin & C. H. Stemen, C. C Stemen and C. B Stemen and a wreck crew left immediately after the news of the wreck was received. The road was blocked just one hour and it by minutes

The crews of the unfortunate trains were:

No 2—Conductor John Phipps, Engineer R. E Doty and Fireman G Huber.

No 4—Conductor Michael O. Gisty, Engineer R. G. Cowan and Fireman L. C. Dailey.

J. J Wood and F. S Hunting, of the electric light company, left for Chicago yesterday. Their mission is business and not one of pleasure.

William Lerch, machinist at the Base works, has taken a week's vacation, a portion of which he will spend in hunting near New Castle, Ind.

The car coupler manufactured at Anderson, Ind., is said to be very successful wherever tested. It is much cheaper and simpler than some other self couplers.

Hubert Noble, route mail agent on the Pittsburg, has returned from Marion, Ind., where he attended the funeral of his father in law, W. H. Bates, who died in that city last Saturday.

Yesterday was another good day for the Pennsylvania company as far as traffic goes. There were twenty five passenger trains through this city between sun rise and dark. The Columbian express ran in eleven sections

The Howe Sewing Machine factory, at Peru, has closed down and its employes were suspended indefinitely. It is believed the works will not resume operations until January 1 Seventy-five men were thrown out of employment.

Union Line dairy product car, built in the Pittsburg shops in this city, was awarded first medal at the world's fair. There were a dozen other cars from other car works on exhibition, but none of them could compare with the Fort Wayne product Master Car Builder James A. Graham naturally feels pretty jubilant over the matter.

Charles Weidman a carpenter at Rhinesmith & Simonson's factory, complained his absence from the shop last Saturday by stating this morning that his wife had presented him with a baby girl and he remained at home to entertain the young lady.

James Sunderland, the Wabash baggage master, this morning received a trunk belonging to a German which was checked for Fort Wayne at Hamburg two years ago. The trunk had been misscarried and the railway employes have ever since been looking for it.

The travel Chicagoward promises to be heavier this week than at any time during the fair. All the roads are running their passenger trains in several sections, and all the trains are loaded to their full capacity. Under these conditions it is not surprising that there is an accident now and then

About time upon man by the name of Forshee went to the world's fair over the Wabash road. He died up there and because the company would not carry the corpse on the excursion ticket on which Forshee went to the fair, his relatives are threatening to sue for damages. The case is a novel one and will attract much attention if brought to a trial

One week from tomorrow the world's fair will close. The country will feel relieved when that event occurs, but no one will rejoice over it more than railway officials and employes. The immense travel to and from the fair has added much to the earnings of all roads, but it has increased the liability to accident and kept railway men on the anxious seat continually. Running trains in two to fifteen sections, often that number in both directions, requires careful watching to prevent head-end collisions, to say nothing about rear collisions The railways are indeed fortunate in having so few accidents, and particularly fortunate is the Pittsburg, which road carried so many people to the fair.

When Nature

Needs assistance it may be best to render it promptly, but one should remember to use even the most perfect remedies only when needed The best and most simple and gentle remedy is the Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

The springboks of South Africa migrate in vast herds, moving in a compact body and carrying every thing before them. If a flock of sheep be in the line of march its sometimes happens that it is surrounded, enveloped and becomes, willingly or unwillingly, part of the springbok army. An African hunter tells of seeing a lion in the midst of the antelopes, forced to join the march It is supposed that the lion had sprung too far for his prey, that those upon whom he alighted recoiled sufficiently to allow him to reach the ground, and then the pressure from both flanks and the rear prevented him from escaping from his strange cap ivity.

They Give Their Reasons.

Perhaps some of our readers would like to know in what respect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better than any other, we will tell you. When this remedy is taken as soon as a cold has been contracted, and before it has become settled in the system, it will counteract the effect of the cold and greatly lessen its severity, and it is the only remedy that will do this. It acts in perfect harmony with nature and aids nature in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions, liquefying the mucus and causing its expulsion from the air cells of the lungs and restoring the system to a strong and healthy condition. No other remedy in the market possesses these remarkable properties. No other will cure a cold so quickly. For sale by druggists.

Tobacco Habit.

Since the world-wide diffusion of the tobacco habit its endless and perhaps original use has been in a great measure overlooked. With the aborigines of America smoking and its kindred practices were not mere sensual gratifications but tobacco was regarded as a herb of peculiar and mysterious sanctity and its use was deeply and intimately interwoven with native rights and ceremonies.

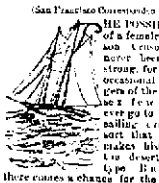
SHE SAILS THE SEAS.

MRS. CAPT. BROCK STEERS FOR THE SOUTH.

With No Chart to Guide Her She Will Seek Strange Lands and Peoples in the South Sea—Directory Her Purpose.

San Francisco Correspondence.



THE POSSIBILITY of a female Robinson Crusoe has never been very strong, for beyond occasional passengers of the gentler sex few women ever get to sea in a sailing craft, the sort that usually makes history or a desert island type But now there comes a chance for the woman castaway to become a reality.

Mrs. Capt. Brock of the schooner Caleb Curtis has gone down among the coral islands of the South Seas on a trading and curio-hunting expedition of her own. Incidentally she will make character studies of the dusky people living on the islets dotting the South Pacific, and return in about two years, and perhaps when a book telling the world all about it.

Her trim craft passed out through the Golden Gate recently on a voyage of discovery, philanthropy and possibly profit.

Mrs. Brock's husband, Capt. Brock, has command of the Caleb Curtis. The captain is known as the "jungle skipper of the South Seas." For years he has traversed among the coral reefed isles of the Marshall and Gilbert groups in search of copra, trading all sorts of trinkets for all sorts of coral with such success that the natives gave him the name of "the jungle man," which name has followed him throughout all his wanderings, wherever he has drifted among the islands of the south.

And now Mrs. Brock has made up her mind to make a voyage herself as a trader and as a looker after adventure.

Never before has such a vessel and such a crew sailed from San Francisco on a like expedition.

Between decks the none too commodious quarters of the Caleb Curtis have been converted into a veritable doll-house of compartments, shelves and lockers. The department to be presided over by Mrs. Brock has been separated from the main cabin by a partition of colored woods dividing off a stateroom, which is in itself a sleeping place, traveling room and bedroom other. There is a trim desk, with its pigeonholes filled with important looking papers, and a solid-looking little safe and the neatly constructed locker for holding a portion of the schooner's available cargo.

The pleasure end of the Caleb Curtis is situated further forward. Carefully stored away in her forward hold is fishing tackle, ammunition, outfits in which to preserve specimens of the marine life of the island waters, and a quantity of reading matter, including magazines and the latest novels.

Mrs. Brock was lover of nature and an ardent student of curios. She has already arranged an elaborate program for her spare moments in the South Seas.

Mrs. Brock is the owner of the Caleb Curtis, and is the person to fit out for the expedition. She has the distinction of being the only woman trader in the world.

The Curtis being a vessel of small draught will be able to approach closer to and visit many coral islets and islands that are not approachable by larger vessels. At these havens Mrs. Brock can easily spend much of her time ashore, and at many of them she will be the first white woman to set foot on their sands.

"A careful study of human nature among the South Sea Islanders," said Mrs. Brock before she sailed, "has never been made, in my opinion. My knowledge of the islands is extensive, and besides this my husband has spent years among them. I believe that a trader alone can get a clear insight into the character of these people. Two years spent among the Marshall and Gilbert groups as an actual trader will give me a great advantage as a student of human nature. I shall be brought into business relations with them, and I hope to do some good among them.

"This is my first experience afloat as a trader, a curio hunter and a seeker of adventure," continued Mrs. Brock, with a laugh. "I suppose I am like me to Mrs. Peary. That would be exaggerating the case a little too much. I do not expect to have to brave any dangers that can bear one comparison by the perils of the Arctic north. I do not see silently as a woman who does not desire any notoriety, when in traveling because she thinks it will help me. But I shall be to her. I shall of course she is a lover of nature and wishes to study it a little in its natural mood."

"We first expect to go to the southern seas," said Capt. Brock, "way when I was sent out by the National museum and the Horticultural gardens people to secure curios. My wife is the real owner of the Curtis and you may say is the commander of the expedition. There will be two seamen and a cook boy, besides my first officer, in the crew.

The Caleb Curtis is one of the smallest, if not the smallest vessel, that ever engaged in the island trade. The only thing about her crew is the fact that a score of natives, her sailors, which was built there specially after her present purchase by Mrs. Brock. All of her accommodations are between decks, the total dimensions of her cabin being about sixty square feet. The quarters of the first officer and seamen are separated from the main cabin by partitions.

She Was Hesitated.

"I've had the worst luck lately," she was saying to a girl friend; "everything goes wrong and it just seems as if I was bewitched or something."

"Been seeing the moon over your left shoulder?"

"Oh, no"

"Got an opal ring?"

"No"

"Perhaps you have been singing before breakfast?"

"No, indeed."

"Do you ever put up your umbrella under a roof?"

"Never"

"Have you any peacock feathers in the house?"

"Yes, I have a fan made of peacock feathers."

"Then go home and burn it and you won't have any more bad luck. Peacock feathers are a hoodoo every time."—Exchange.

A Little Too Much.

The Detroit woman must the other morning on the street and with a sympathetic impulse they began to talk about their boy.

"Have you got a girl yet?" asked one.

"No; have you?" followed the other.

"I've had about a dozen in the last month, and they are no good. The cap sheaf was laid on, though, yesterday."

"How was that?" came the eagerly curious interruption.

"Well, a very stylish girl of about 20 called at seven o'clock about a place I liked her looks, though she was dressed better than I was, but I thought as she was so particular about her clothes she'd be nice every other way. Of course, she was haughty and proud, but lots of untidy girls are that way, so I overlooked that, too, and I had practically engaged her when what do you think she wanted?"

"Six nights out and two afternoons for matinees," suggested the other.

"No, not that. Would you believe it? She wanted an extra room for her maid to occupy. Now, what do you think of that?" and the other one dropped her power of thinking.—Detroit Free Press.

Less Harder.

They had read all their papers and were going home. One of the boys lagged a little, and, becoming weaker and weaker, leaned upon the other for support.

"Brace up, pard, we'll be home soon. Lean harder."

The way seemed long and the burden of his ailing comrade was heavy, but the little fellow was game and kept on.

"Can't see very well, Joe. Things is gittin' dark an' there's a buzzin' in my ears."

And as they disappeared in a low doorway, Joe almost carrying his sick friend, and still his voice ran out cheerily:

"Hold on now, pard; lean harder."—Detroit Free Press.

A Sunday School Guest.

A small boy from the slums had been brought into the mission school and for a couple of Sundays he had been instructed in the rudiments. On the third Sunday he brought with him his brother William. To test his memory the teacher began to go over the previous lessons.

"Who made you?" she asked.

"God," he replied promptly.

"And what else did God make?"

The youngster studied a moment and looked around hopelessly, till he noticed his brother; then his face brightened.

"He made Bill, too, I guess," he answered, and William said: "You bet."—Exchange.

Her Great Trouble.

"What a love of a dog!" exclaimed a caller at a Jefferson avenue mansion as a bundle of hair and ribbons trotted into the room.

"Yes, but he's a dreadful care," sighed the mistress of the household, sadly.

"What do you mean?" asked the visitor in surprise.

"Why, you know I bought Bijou in Paris last summer and he doesn't understand a word of English, so I had a French maid for him altogether, but last June she insisted on marrying some horrid creature, and now we have a French-Canadian girl and she won't learn dog-French."

"Does she stone him?" asked the visitor, indignantly.

"Oh, dear no. She's as kind as can be, but these Canadians speak such poor French—suppose she should ruin Bijou's accent! I couldn't be sick to think of it."—Exchange.

The highwaymen are supposed to be the same who held up John Fleptstick on West Wayne street the same evening.

Last Saturday evening Fort Wayne music loving people had the great privilege of hearing Dyved Lewys, of Wales, one of the great tenor singers of the world. When it is taken into consideration that he is Patti's tenor and that she selects none but the very best, he must possess merit of a marked degree. Those who heard him speak very highly and say he is one of the finest tenor singers who has ever been in this city. Prof. Miles deserves great credit for bringing such talent to Fort Wayne, and it is a great pity that Mr. Lewys was obliged to sing to less than a hundred people. Mrs. D. Bell, of Luna, Ohio, who is a beautiful singer, sang several selections, and the male chorus also did some excellent singing. The accompanists were Miss Lou Long and Mrs. D. S. Root.

The game of foot ball at Lakeside park Saturday afternoon drew out a fair sized crowd. The Hillsdale boys were, however, too strong for the Fort Wayne eleven. The score stood 22 to 0 in favor of the Hillsdales at the end of the second half. The college boys worked a whirling wedge on the home eleven, the like of which has never been seen here. In the second half Shepard, Fort Wayne's right half, dropped out and left took his place. Upham, who had been playing full back, jumped up to his usual place on the right end. By using them cards in a full back and Hemp distance was easily applied by the crowd. Medlar also did some splendid work and was loudly applauded but the Y. M. C. A. seemed to be a great deal, which evidently caused them to lose the game. Buck Townsend, of the Randall, took care of the visitors, and they returned home well pleased with their treatment in the city.

Sent Over to Jail by Mayor Zollinger Today.

They Were Arrested Yesterday for Begging on the Streets—A Thief Picks up an Overcoat.

There was a motley crowd of bums up before Mayor Zollinger this morning at police court. Their names were James Murphy, John Clark, Henry Murphy and John Gorman. One said he was a gold digger from Montana, another said he was a table cleaner, that is, he cleaned the tables after the family had finished their meal, the other two also claimed to be workmen out of employment. All the men were yesterday arrested for begging. They stopped everyone they saw and asked aid. All were big, stout looking fellows and were able to work. They were sent over to jail upon a fine of $5 and costs each. One of the men was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Strait and the others by officers Rohrer and McIntire.

The officers were notified but it was too late, as the thief could not be located.

YOUNG LAD KILLED.

A Large Log Rolls Upon Him—Home Burned.

Word reached Fort Wayne Saturday evening of a sad accident which occurred at New Haven, about 4 o'clock that day. The little three-year-old son of James Dawkins, a farmer, living three miles east of New Haven, was crushed to death. Mr. Dawkins was engaged in building a log granary, and the little fellow was playing on the opposite side of the granary from his father, when a large log rolled off striking the child and knocking him down. The father rushed to that side only to find his little one with life extinct, the log having fallen across his breast crushing it in. Funeral services were held this morning at 10 o'clock from St. John's Catholic church, at New Haven.

POSTMASTER LORDIER

Replies to the Charges Made Against Him.

To the Editor of THE SENTINEL:

A few days ago an article appeared in the Fort Wayne News, saying that the postmaster at St. Vincent was in bad order. To this I will say that the post-office of said place, from its first opening up to the present time, has been honestly and faithfully conducted, to the best of my knowledge. Receiving and delivering mail has never been refused to any one.

Said article is nothing more nor less than a cowardly act, no matter from whom it has originated. All I ask or desire not interested in my affairs is to leave me alone and to attend to their own business.

A Specific for Croup.

"I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a specific for croup. It is very pleasant to take, which is one of the most important requisites where a cough remedy is intended for use among children. I have known of cases of croup where I know the life of a little one was saved by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy." J. J. LaGrange, druggist, Avoca, Neb. 50 cent bottles for sale by druggists.
